

LACK OF FAITH IN ALDRICH

TAFT AND CABINET LOOKING AFTER CORPORATION TAX.

PROGRESSIVES FEELING BLUE

Believe Alleged Friends of Corporation Will Knife It—Fear Fate of Income Tax Idea.

Washington, June 21.—To indicate how thoroughly in earnest President Taft is about putting the corporation tax amendment through the Senate developed today. The problem is receiving constant consideration at the hands of the Cabinet and the members of the State Finance Committee, and is being worked out step by step. There are evidences that the President has not the same abiding faith in Senator Aldrich in the matter of corporation tax that he has in the matter of the alleged revision downward, and the President has taken steps that will insure his getting before the Senate the kind of a corporation tax amendment that he wants. For this week he is availing himself of the services of Attorney General Wickersham. The Attorney General made two trips to the Capitol today to consult with the Republican members of the Finance Committee. President Taft has urged that in these conferences Senator Root, who is not a member of the Finance Committee, participate, while Secretary of State Knox is working with the President on the measure. Phases of the new amendment that have been tentatively settled relate to the question of bonds and to the question of exemption. It is agreed that the tax will not touch preferred stocks or bonds, except where one corporation controls another corporation, in which case the holding company must pay the tax on the interest of the bonds of the concern for which it is the holding company. The amendment will also provide a method of reaching companies which issue bonds in excess of the amount of their stock.

The President for the past few days has been flooded with protests and objections against the proposed tax. Some of these come from corporation men and some from Republicans who object to having an income tax displaced by a corporation tax. The great objection of the corporation managers to a corporation tax is not so much the amount of tax involved, but, as one of them put it to the President today, to the system of inspection which must be established to insure the Government getting all of the tax due it.

"We all know," said this man, "that we are coming to direct taxation sooner or later, and it might as well come now. There will be only a few who will object to paying the small tax, but what we all object to is some $1,200 inspector coming into our offices, checking the inside workings of our affairs and then selling them to a rival for $200."

Criticisms are coming in from all over the country, but President Taft maintains an optimistic view of the situation. The bulk of the criticism is that the corporation tax movement will result in nothing more than the sidetracking of the proposed income tax.

Progressive Republican Senators today predicted death for the President's net earnings tax amendment to the pending tariff bill. They asserted that it will be assassinated in the house of its reputed friends, meaning Senator Aldrich and other opponents of their income-tax plans. As explained by them, their sentiment being based largely on the attitude of the Eastern press, the attitude of Wall street, which the "progressives" claim Senator Aldrich and his friends exclusively represent, and the attitude of the Aldrich crowd in general, the corporation tax will be killed in the conference between the two houses of Congress on the tariff bill before it is finally passed.

As for the proposed Constitutional amendment permitting the levying of an income tax, they fervently believe it will pass Congress, only to be defeated in enough of the States controlled by the Aldrich Senators and their friends to sign its death warrant.

ROMANCE OF YOUNG BRYAN

MET FUTURE WIFE ON TRIP AROUND THE WORLD.

PARENTS OF BOTH OBJECT

Knew Each Other When Children But Cupid Was Not Busy Then.

Lincoln, Neb., June 19.—From the palace of a duke to the calm heights of Grand Lake, in sight of three of the highest peaks in Colorado, is spun a thread of romance and persistent wooing that will culminate in the marriage of Helen Berger, the daughter of a wealthy Nebraska grain man, and William J. Bryan, Jr., son of the recent candidate for president on the Democratic ticket.

Young Bryan knew his fiancée when both were children, but Cupid was not lurking about them then.

The meeting from which their love sprang came when the Bryans were making their trip around the world. The party arrived in Venice, Mr. and Mrs. Bryan, their daughter, Grace, and their son, William, "died" the town, going about from one place of interest to another, and through palaces that are now galleries and museums.

In one of these old palaces the Bryans and the Bergers met. Young Bryan and Miss Berger immediately drew a circle about themselves from which they shut others and devoted themselves to each other. Alexander Berger, the father of the bride-to-be, saw this exclusive devotion. He and his daughter immediately had business elsewhere, he said. They went to Paris and to Liverpool. William, Jr., tried to follow, but he could invent no adequate excuse for leaving the family party. Finally he did break away and arrived in Liverpool a day after the Bergers had departed for America.

When the Bryans returned to America the pursuing wooer found that the Bergers had returned to Lincoln, where they formerly lived. The Bryans came to Lincoln. The same train from which they stepped after their world trip was the conveyance that bore Mr. Berger and his daughter to Grand Lake, Colo. Not disheartened by missing Miss Berger at Liverpool, New York and Lincoln, William, Jr., raced to Fairview, then back to town and took the next train for Colorado.

Since Miss Berger's mother died a few years ago, she has lived with Mr. and Mrs. Levering when not with her father. The Leverings opposed a marriage on the ground that the globetrotters were too young. W. J. Bryan dropped politics long enough to suggest to his son, it is said that he had better wait a few years before he married. William, Jr., is 23 years old, and his fiancée is 20.

Early last summer the glamour of the mountains, of swift running brooks and leaping trout caught the fancy of William, Jr. He had just finished his sophomore years at the University of Nebraska. With fishing rod, landing net and a half dozen books of flies in his satchel, William Bryan, Jr., left the university for the mountains. Curiously enough the fishing near Grand Lake most attracted him. Miss Berger was still there. After a few weeks young Bryan returned to Fairview. The presidential campaign was at its hottest, but the son of the Democratic leader didn't care much for politics. Again this summer William, Jr., and Miss Berger are at Grand Lake. Miss Berger is living with Mr. and Mrs. Levering. The announcement of the wedding was first made at their home. It is understood that the young couple will go to Tucson, Ariz., after June 24.

OUR GUTHRIE CORRESPONDENT

Guthrie, Okla., June 21.—A special two days meeting of the State Board of Agriculture held at the office of the board in this city Thursday and Friday, was one of the most important meetings of that body ever held,
not so much in the volume of business transacted as in the number and importance of new issues created.

The meeting was called to let the contracts for the district agricultural school buildings at Tishomingo and Warner. This brought up the question as to whether the State Board of Agriculture or the Board of Public Affairs had the authority to let these contracts. The Board of Agriculture has always contended that the legislature could not modify or abridge its powers and duties as a board of regents as specified in the Constitution, and by unanimous vote proceeded to let these contracts as they had in April let the contract for the boys dormitory and women's building at the A. & M. College. The contract for the Warner and Tishomingo schools went to the McKee Construction Co., of Muskogee, Oklahoma, at a price of $18,654, for the Warner school, and $18,758 for the Tishomingo school. Each building to be finished October 1, 1909.

Much of the time of the two days session was devoted to the affairs of the Agricultural and Mechanical College at Stillwater. Orders previously made for the purchase of individual specimens of pure bred cattle, hogs and sheep were confirmed and added to, and director John A. Craig of the experiment station, and Ewars White, chairman of the college committee, were instructed to examine and make the necessary selections.
Important sheep breeding experiments under the authority and with the co-operation of the Federal department were ordered carried out.

The financial budget for the ensuing year was carefully gone over and approved. Selections to fill vacancies at the heads of several departments created by resignations, etc., were given careful consideration and final action taken in the selection of President Connell and Chairman White of the college committee to visit St. Louis or other central points and meet a number of the applicants whose qualifications had been passed upon by the board. Several important chairs are to be filled and the board recognizes the necessity of exercising great care in making these selections, since not only the qualifications but the personality of the teacher must be taken into consideration.

The board ordered the registrar at the college to advertise for and receive bids on the years supply of fuel. It also ordered the secretary to renew a $20,000 insurance policy on boilers. Both of these latter items are included in the duties of other boards of regents which the board of Public Affairs was appointed to take over and perform. It should be understood that there is no conflict or friction between the Board of Agriculture and the Board of Public Affairs as to their relations, and the rights of the latter in all matters not involved in the constitutional provisions creating the Board of Agriculture, but the latter board holds that the Constitution having made them
the board of regents of the A. & M.
College, and that all the duties of the Board of Regents are thereby made incumbent upon them and that they cannot if they would, turn these duties over to the Board of Public Affairs, the legislature having no power to relieve or modify those responsibilities. The institute committee of the board, together with the president, secretary and superintendent of the institutes were ordered to prepare a program for the three days annual state institute to be held at Stillwater in August.

The work of the board in every department was reported to be making rapid and substantial progress and a special satisfaction was created by Live Stock Superintendent Bryan's report of local interest and cooperation in the work of tick eradication. County farmers institute work will be pressed during the new institute year which opens with the annual meeting, with renewed vigor.

With the exception of the four northwestern counties of the state where institutes are to be held during the first week in July. The state is now thoroughly organized and the work from this time forward will make substantial and progressive strides.
The board will take an active and earnest part in the work of encouraging county exhibits at the State Fair, and a big corn exhibit at the National Corn Exposition at Omaha next December.

The State Board of Agriculture,
under the terms of the Russell Act,
will not take up any county demonstration farm work until January 1st, 1910. They are co-operating wherever possible with the United States farm demonstration work which is being carried on extensively in many counties under the excellent management of W. D. Bentley.

Potentates to Hohob.

El Paso, Texas, June 21.—The Mexican Herald, Mexico City, says:

"Replying to a communication from the White House at Washington, through the Mexican embassy there, President Diaz has expressed his desire to meet President Taft for a personal interview, which will take place at one of the points on the boundary line between Mexico and the United States some time during the last part of the year."

Is Mark Twain Guilty?

Mark Twain should not endorse this theory that Bacon wrote Shakespeare too heartily or after he is dead and gone some one may arise with a cryptogram and a lot of logic to prove that Mark Twain's books were written by his old friend, Henry H. Rogers, the brilliant financier who palmed the books off on Mark lest his own reputation in business circles might be injured if he confessed such authorship. And the man, if at all ingenious, could make out a good case.

COUNTERFEIT DEN IS DISCOVERED

PROFITS ON NICKEL AND DIME BASIS TOO SLOW.

Later the Country Was Flooded With Fives and Tens.

Shawnee, Okla., June 22.—Some interesting facts have come to light in the discovery of a group of alleged counterfeiters in this section by government officials. In the report which is being prepared for the State Bankers' association, it is stated that the gang had operated in this vicinity for the past two years and had a dug-out on the edge of the McConkey pasture, southeast of the city, where they made their monies.

Will Cuppy, who worked in the local Rock Island shops at one time, and who was arrested here last week will have a hearing today in the federal court at Guthrie.

The dug-out used by the gang has been watched for the past two years. It is located in the McConkey pasture and is situated one hundred yards straight south of the first mile post on the Rock Island east of the city. The entrance is carefully concealed behind a large boulder. This, when placed to one side, reveals a small hole, just large enough for a man to crawl through, which runs eight feet back, then turns and after a length of twenty more feet opens into a dug-out large enough to move around in. Here the operations are said to have been carried on.

First 25-cent and 50-cent pieces were made and turned loose. Later excellent $5 and $10 gold pieces were put on the market. One party alleged to have assisted the gang lives at Purcell, and two others resided at Enid.

Eighteen months ago, when Cuppy was at El Reno, numerous counterfeit five-cent pieces were found in circulation.

KEIFER SUFFERS

A HEAVY FIRE

ELEVEN BUILDINGS BURN WITH A TOTAL LOSS OF $50,000.

Sapulpa, Okla., June 21.—Eleven buildings in the business and residence sections of Keifer, an oil town near Sapulpa, were destroyed by a fire of unknown origin this afternoon. The loss probably will reach $50,000. The town is without fire fighting apparatus and the water pressure in the mains was of no avail.

The stricken section is west of the Frisco tracks and buildings and stocks were burned as follows: Dr. Jones' drug store, Hughes' pool hall, W. M. Evans' hardware store, Charles Denton's residence, the Keifer State bank the Keifer Mercantile company, the Delough grocery store, the Ohio restaurant, W. L. Barnes' office, H. G. Rhodabarger's residence and W. H. Hick's residence.

OKLAHOMA'S WORTH.

Estimates on Assessed Valuation is Enormous.

Guthrie, Okla., June 21.—Oklahoma's assessed valuation for 1909 will reach figures between $800,000, 000, estimates R. C. Cain of State Auditor Trapp's office. Mr. Cain is the secretary and accountant of the state board of equalization and assessment.

The assessment was $727,722,516. The board has not completed its work by any means but preliminary figures fix a probable increase of 25 per cent on public service corporation's property, with the exception of telephones, telegraphs, railroads, etc., which are still out. Railroads will have a valuation approximately 5 per cent higher than last year. Local assessors, according to the 16 counties out of 75 which have reported will run their totals 10 per cent higher than 1908. The counties of Eastern Oklahoma are reporting higher totals, due to natural increase in valuations and to removal of restrictions from Indian lands. There is a natural increase over the entire state perceptible in the reports, and Mr. Cain thinks his estimate conservative.

Corporate property of a public service nature will probably run towards $250,000,000.

Can You Find It?

One of the hardest things to find these days, is a woman's waist. This is because of the new fangled dresses they wear now, the style which has come over from Paris, and was originated, no one knows how or under what circumstances. According to the new style the waist line is all the way from where God intended it to be up to a ribbon around the neck. It's location by the mere use of the eye is as elusive as the bag of gold at the end of the rainbow.—Mt. Pleasant Times-Review.

The Knockers Knock.

The Guthrie Capital, after devoting most of its paper to an assault on Oklahoma City, now runs a regular department entitled "Graft City News". The Oklahoma City commercial club's advertising committee should do the right thing by the Capital, if it can show the proper circulation. Happy is that town whose rivals put in most of their time knocking it instead of trying to be good towns themselves.—McAlester News.

Their Deeds are Evil.

Some people put their merchandise and goods which they have for sale in show windows and show cases, some put them behind screens and blinds. Some people had rather buy some of the things they buy behind these screens and blinds. We wonder if this is in keeping with the good book where it says: "Men love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil."—Marshall County News.

"IT DOETH NOT YET APPEAR
WHAT WE SHALL BE"

William Carter, D.D.

From Oklahoma Baptist Journal.

Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is.—1 John iii. 2.

The text shows us at once the definiteness and the indefiniteness of Scripture statement. The definite is grand and glorious, but in indefinite is majestic and sublime. There is an indefiniteness that is filled with doubt and haunting fear; there is another, however, that is filled so full with glorious promise as to stagger the mind and imagination of man and make him hesitate to go forward in the line of its fulfillment.

It is of this kind that the text here speaks. The definite "now are we" of the first clause is followed by the still more definite "we know" of the last clause, but in between, the apostle, realizing how great already is our blessing as sons of God, hesitates to go forward to the concluding-state of glory that awaits us, and with hesitating mind and halting imagination he says: "It doth not yet appear what we shall be." Mind can not grasp the thought of the glory that shall afterward await us. "But," he says, with a little of his old confidence returning, "we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is."

There is a threefold cord that should bind every christian to his God, and to the vows that he has taken upon himself. The strands of this cord are: Faith or hope, patience and duty; duty for the present hour, patience for the present trial, and faith for the glorious future which God has promised.

At first glance it seems as tho the text were all glory, all hope and joy and blishest promise. There seems to be no duty mentioned, no patience urged as necessary. Hope is the lodestar in this firmament of promise, and it is that that attracts our hearts and holds them by its power.

"Now are we the sons of God!" resents glory! "And it doth not yet appear what we shall be." Future expectation! "But we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." Definite promise! Where is the duty here? If you will look closely you will find it in the hiatus between the first and second clauses. First, there is the definite statement made as to our sonship with God, and then the hesitating expression that dares not predicate what our future glory shall be. In between these two lies the thought of duty as I see it.

"Now are we the sons of God." Can anything be higher than that? It is that which makes heaven's arches ring with glad hosannas as the redeemed of the Lord realize what it all means. Surely this is as high as human thought and desire can reach, and yet there seems to be a higher glory in reserve for us, for the apostle goes on to say that, notwithstanding all this that we have already received, it is no guide in any sense as to the greater blessings we shall receive—blessings so great that he is compelled to be indefinite in mentioning them, and all he can say concerning them is: "It doth not yet appear what we shall be."

What does it all mean, and what is our duty in view of these things? Ask that young man born in a cultured christian home, given all the advantages of physical, mental and spiritual development, having superabounding love lavished upon him, being the object of constant thought and care and solicitude. Will he not tell you that for all the love, for all the care, for all the high and blest advantages which have been given him, he owes a higher duty to the parents who have thus watched over him and given him these things? Will he not tell you that, for all the privileges and opportunities rests upon him toward those who have made these things possible? Then if he does not he is an ingrate, a renegade, a base betrayer of the heart's greatest trust, and does not know what duty is!

What is it we expect of one from such a home, from one who has had such blessings showered upon him? You say as you see him go forward with high endeavor and noble aim: "He ought to make something of himself; he certainly has had a good start." Ah, yes, there is everything in the start, is there not? But the better the start the greater the responsibility resting upon us, the higher the duty that God requires of us!

"Beloved, now are we the sons of God." We have had a good start. God has given us the greatest opportunities as his children, and is giving them to us every day. It is only a start, tho, that He has given us. "Now," He says, after He has given us all the care and attention and love that was necessary, after lavishing upon us all the blessings that His absorbing love suggested, after giving unto us salvation itself through Jesus Christ our Lord—"now work out your own salvation with fear and trembling. I have put it in you, now work it out. Let the world see that it is there, and that you are using it day by day."

"Now are we the sons of God." Aye, but that is not all that God wants us to be. There are many kinds of sons. Slothful sons, selfish sons, thoughtless sons, indifferent sons, and earnest, zealous, loving sons. Which kind are we? Are we doing nothing to show our sonship, our filial devotion? Then were it better that we had not the name! Since we have been reckoned into the family of God let us be worthy of the name! Let us realize our higher duty because of the great blessing that God has given unto us! Here is where the duty is shown. For every blessing that God has given to you, for every advantage that he has put or is putting into your hand, He will require the higher duty and the world will require it, too, based upon a perfectly fair and reasonable view of your relationship with God.

We see then that sonship involves duty. That duty fulfilled, the apostle rightly pauses ere he pronounces the blessing that God will then give. "Now are we the sons of God; but, that sonship rightly used, that filial duty rightly fulfilled, it doth not yet appear what we shall be!" The statement is not so strange, or do we wonder that John used it in such hesitation when we look upon it in this way. A faithful son, a loving father; the son fulfilling in every way possible his filial duty! Can you or I put the limits on that father's love and say to what bounds it will go? Nay, with such faithfulness, with such filial devotion shown, it doth not yet appear, it never will appear, to what lengths that father's love will go! A need arises, a great one perhaps, for the son, and the father promptly meets it, and you say: "Well, that is certainly more than could have been expected! Human love can go no farther than that." Can it not? Wait and see. Another need arises, and again the father meets it, and gladly meets it, and the world is astonished at the father's sacrifice. Sacrifice? The father sees no sacrifice in it. Why, sir, he says to expostulating friends, "you don't know that boy. Think of how he has stood by me. How he has worked with me day in and day out from the time he was able to do anything. He never complained, he never shirked his duty, he never went back on his old father, even when most of the world seemed to have gone back on me. Why, bless your life, sir, after such devotion as that boy has shown, after such dutiful regard as he has given, I would sell all I have and give it to him willingly, if he needed it! I would dare anything, I would risk everything, rather than that he should suffer."

Have I overdrawn it, fathers? Nay, it can not be overdrawn, it can not be rightly pictured, the love and devotion a father has to a faithful, dutiful, filial son. That, therefore, is just the way John puts it here. He can not picture it all out, and so he just says as his imagination fails him: "If we are not the sons of God, and faithful sons, duty-loving sons, then it doth not yet appear what we shall be, for eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for those that love Him."

Here then is a call to duty, and at the same time a stimulus to it. As we have been received into the sonship of God, it is not in order to selfish ease, but it is to work for Him and for humanity. Every advantage He has given you, every blessing, every opportunity that is yours lays the duty, the responsibility, the more heavily upon you. "Unto whomsoever much is given of him shall much be required." God has given much to you and He is expecting much in return. Yet it is not merely to be in payment for his blessings, a "quid pro quo" to balance the account; for just as soon as the Lord sees we are in earnest, that we are improving the talents that He has given us, that we are faithful and loyal to Him; then, John says, human imagination can not picture the infinitely greater blessings that He will give us, and the sons of God now, the state we then shall hold will be so inconceivably glorious that it hath not entered into the mind of man even to imagine it!

One other thing that is emphasized in this same inference of duty, however, is patience. "It doth not yet appear what we shall be."

We all must realize as workers for God that we can not wage our warfare on any lines of earthly strategy or wisdom. There are many who would have ushered in the millennium even before Christ was crucified, if we may be pardoned the anachronism! These, however, were the impatient ones who were always carrying their swords half-drawn, who were anxious for the signal to be given to fall upon their enemies and win them either dead or alive for God.

It is always a longer process to win an enemy by love than by force but the former is by far the more permanent victory. Mohammed made converts quicker by fire and sword than Jesus did by love, but Jesus' converts last longer and His system is more widely spread today. Force endures for a time, but only as long as it maintains its strength. Love never faileth. It increases in power as it goes forward and wins at last even the most intractable to be its strong devoted followers.

Do not find fault, there, with God's plans. Do not be crying out with the doubting ones: "Where is the promise of His coming, for since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were from the foundation of the world." They do not! There is a steady, quiet work of grace going on throughout the world that is going at last to bring the kingdoms of this world to Christ, and cause all opposition to cease, and peace and righteousness to establish itself as a universal blessing.

Quiet, yes, but mighty through God to the pulling down of the strongholds of Satan! Quite it was that fateful night when Sennacherib lay down before the walls of Jerusalem after his boasting message to Hezekiah. He expected on the morrow to go up in great power and lay waste the sacred city, but in the darkness of the night—

"The Angel of death spread his wings on the blast,

And breathed in the face of the foe as he passed,

And the might of the Gentiles unsmote by the sword

Hath melted like snow in the glance of the Lord."

Quite, as on that other fateful night in Belshazzar's hall, when Daniel read the mystic writing on the wall. "Thou art weighed in the balances, and found wanting," and the story closes with the significant words: "And that night was Belshazzar king of the Chaldeans slain."

Do not doubt God's power because He does not make a great noise. The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, not noisy nor showy. We are not fighting with bluff, or bluster, or bombast, but with such mighty weapons as work with the power and yet the silence of the best and most carefully constructed machinery.

TATT AND CABINET LOOKING AFTER CORPORATION TAX.

PROGRESSIVES FEELING BLUE

Believe Alleged Friends of Corporation Will Knave It—Fear Fate of Income Tax Idea.

Washington June 21.—To indicate how thoroughly in earnest President Taft is about putting the corporation tax amendment through the Senate developed today the problem is receiving constant consideration at the hands of the Cabinet and the members of the State Finance Committee and is being worked out step by step. There are evidences that the President has not the same blinding faith in Senator Aldrich in the matter of corporation tax that he has in the matter of the alleged revision downward and the President has taken steps that will insure his getting before the Senate the kind of a corporation tax amendment that he wants. For this week he is availing himself of the services of Attorney General Wickensham. The Attorney General made two trips to the Capitol today to consult with the Republican members of the Finance Committee. President Taft has urged that in these conferences Senator Root who is not a member of the Finance Committee participate while Secretary of State Knox is working with the President on the measure.

Phases of the new amendment that have been tentatively settled relate to the question of bonds and to the question of exemption. It is agreed that the tax will not touch preferred stocks or bonds except where one corporation controls another corporation in which case the holding company must pay the tax on the interest of the bonds of the concern for which it is the holding company. The amendment will also provide a method of reaching companies which issue bonds in excess of the amount of their stock.

The President for the past few days has been flooded with protests and objections against the proposed tax. Some of these come from corporation men and some from Republicans who object to having an income tax displaced by a corporation tax. The great objection of the corporation managers to a corporation tax is not so much the amount of tax involved but as one of them put it to the President today to the system of inspection which must be established to insure the Government getting all of the tax due it.

We all know said this man that we are coming to direct taxation sooner or later and it might as well come now. There will be only a few who will object to paying the small tax but what we all object to is some $1,200 inspector coming into our offices getting the inside workings of our affairs and then selling them to a rival for $200.

Criticisms are coming in from all over the country but President Taft maintains an optimistic view of the situation. The bulk of the criticism is that the corporation tax movement will result in nothing more than the sidetracking of the proposed income tax.

Progressive Republican Senators today predicted death for the President's net earnings tax amendment to the pending tariff bill. They asserted that it will be assassinated in the house of its reputed friends meaning Senator Aldrich and other opponents of their income tax plans. As explained by them their sentiment being based largely on the attitude of the Eastern press, the attitude of Wall street which the press copies, claim Senator Aldrich and his friends exclusively represent and the attitude of the Aldrich crowd in general the corporation tax will be killed in the conference between the two houses of Congress on the tariff bill before it is finally passed.

As for the proposed Constitutional amendment permitting the levying of an income tax, they recently believe it will pass Congress only to be defeated in enough of the States controlled by the Aldrich Senators and their friends to sign its death warrant.

ROMANCE OF YOUNG BRYAN

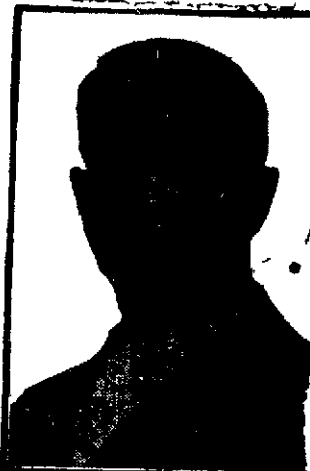

NOT FUTURE WIFE ON TRIP AROUND THE WORLD.

PARENTS OF BOTH OBJECT

Knew Each Other When Children But Cupid Was Not Busy Then.

Lincoln, Neb., June 19.—From the palace of a 17-story to the calm heights of Grand Lake is a bit of three of the highest peaks in Colorado is spun a thread of romance and persistent wooing that will culminate in the marriage of Helen Berger, the daughter of a wealthy Nebraska grain man and William J. Bryan, son of the recent candidate for president on the Democratic ticket.

Young Bryan knew his fiancée when both were children. Cupid was not looking about them then.

The meeting from which then love sprung came when the boys were making their trip around the world. The party included Alexander and Mrs. Bryan then called to see and then so when in the place of interest to another and through passages that are now galleries and museums.

In one of these old palaces, the Bryans and the Berbers met. Young Bryan and Miss Berger immediately drew a circle of friendship from which they have not yet departed. They devoted themselves to each other. Alexander Berger, the father of the bride to be, said this exclusive love in the end his daughter married in 1901. She was elsewhere he all the way to Paris and to Live and William Jr. tried to follow but he could invent no adequate excuse for leaving the family part. Finally he did break away and arrived in Liverpool a day after the Berbers had departed for America.

When the Bryans returned to America the pursuing wooer found that the Berbers had returned to Lincoln where they formerly lived. The Bryans came to Lincoln the same train from which they stepped after their world trip was the company that bore Mr. Berger and his daughter to Grand Lake. Colorado. Not disheartened by missing Miss Berger at Liverpool, New York and Lincoln, William Jr. raced to Fairview then back to town and took the next train for Colorado.

Since Miss Berger mother died a few years ago, she has lived with Mr. and Mrs. Levering. When not with her father, The Leverings opposed a marriage on the ground that the glibsters were too young. W. J. Bryan dropped politics long enough to suggest to his son it is said that he had better wait a few years before he married William Jr. is 2 years old and his fiancée is 20.

Early last summer the fiancée of the mountains of the mountain brooks and leaping trout caught the fancy of William Jr. He had just finished his sophomore year at the University of Nebraska. With fishing rod, landing net and a half dozen books of flies in his satchel, William Bryan Jr. left the university for the mountains. Curiously enough the fishing near Grand Lake most attracted him. Miss Berger was still there. After a few weeks young Bryan returned to Fairview. The presidential campaign was at its hottest but the son of the Democratic leader didn't care much for politics. Again this summer William Jr. and Miss Berger are at Grand Lake. Miss Berger is living with Mr. and Mrs. Levering. The announcement of the wedding was first made at their home. It is understood that the young couple will go to Tucson, Ariz. after June 24.

OUR GUTHRIE CORRESPONDENT

Guthrie, Okla., June 21.—A special two days meeting of the State Board of Agriculture held at the office of the board in this city Thursday and Friday, was one of the most important meetings of that body ever held, not so much in the volume of business transacted as in the number and importance of new issues created.

The meeting was called to let the contracts for the district agricultural school buildings at Tishomingo and Warner. This brought up the question as to whether the State Board of Agriculture or the Board of Public Affairs had the authority to let these contracts. The Board of Agriculture has always contended that the legislature could not modify or abridge its powers and duties as a board of regents as specified in the Constitution, and by unanimous vote proceeded to let these contracts as they had in April let the contract for the boys dormitory and women's building at the A. & M. College. The contract for the Warner and Tishomingo schools went to the McKee Construction Co., of Muskogee, Oklahoma, at a price of $18,654, for the Warner school, and $18,758 for the Tishomingo school. Each building to be finished October 1, 1909.

Much of the time of the two days session was devoted to the affairs of the Agricultural and Mechanical College at Stillwater. Orders previously made for the purchase of individual specimens of pure bred cattle, hogs and sheep were confirmed and added to, and director John A. Craig of the experiment station, and Ewers White, chairman of the college committee, were instructed to examine and make the necessary selections. Important sheep breeding experiments under the authority and with the co-operation of the Federal department were ordered carried out.

The financial budget for the ensuing year was carefully gone over and approved. Selections to fill vacancies at the heads of several departments created by resignations, etc., were given careful consideration and final action taken in the selection of President Connell and Chairman White of the college committee to visit St. Louis or other central points and meet a number of the applicants whose qualifications had been passed upon by the board. Several important chairs are to be filled and the board recognizes the necessity of exercising great care in making these selections, since not only the qualifications but the personality of the teacher must be taken into consideration.

The board ordered the registrar at the college to advertise for and receive bids on the years supply of fuel. It also ordered the secretary to renew a $20,000 insurance policy on boilers. Both of these latter items are included in the duties of other boards of regents which the board of Public Affairs was appointed to take over and perform. It should be understood that there is no conflict or friction between the Board of Agriculture and the Board of Public Affairs as to their relations, and the rights of the latter in all matters not involved in the constitutional provisions creating the Board of Agriculture, but the latter board holds that the Constitution having made them the board of regents of the A. & M. College, and that all the duties of the Board of Regents are thereby made incumbent upon them and that they cannot if they would, turn these duties over to the Board of Public Affairs, the legislature having no power to relieve or modify those responsibilities. The Institute committee of the board, together with the president, secretary and superintendent of the institutes were ordered to prepare a program for the three days annual state institute to be held at Stillwater in August.

The work of the board in every department was reported to be making rapid and substantial progress and a special satisfaction was created by Live Stock Superintendent Bryan's report of local interest and co-operation in the work of tick eradication. County farmers institute work will be pressed during the now institute year which opens with the annual meeting, with renewed vigor. With the exception of the four north-western counties of the state where institutes are to be held during the first week in July. The state is now thoroughly organized and the work from this time forward will make substantial and progressive strides. The board will take an active and earnest part in the work of encouraging county exhibits at the State Fair, and a big corn exhibit at the National Corn Exposition at Omaha next December.

The State Board of Agriculture, under the terms of the Russell Act, will not take up any county demonstration farm work until January 1st, 1910. They are co-operating wherever possible with the United States farm demonstration work which is being carried on extensively in many counties under the excellent management of W. D. Bentley.

Potentials to Hobnob.

El Paso, Texas, June 21.—The Mexican Herald, Mexico City, says:

Is Mark Twain Guilty?

Mark Twain should not endorse this theory that Bacon wrote Shakespeare too heartily or after he is dead and gone some one may arise with a cryptogram and a lot of logic to prove that Mark Twain's books were written by his old friend, Henry H. Rogers, the brilliant financier who patmed the books off on Mark lest his own reputation in business circles might be injured if he confessed such authorship. And the man, if at all ingenious, could make out a good case.

COUNTERFEIT DEN IS DISCOVERED

PROFITS ON NICKEL AND DIME BASIS TOO SLOW.

Later the Country Was Flooded With Fives and Tens.

Shawnee, Okla., June 22.—Some interesting facts have come to light in the discovery of a group of alleged counterfeiters, in this section by government officials. In the report which is being prepared for the State Bankers' association, it is stated that the gang had operated in this vicinity for the past two years and had a dug-out on the edge of the McConkey pasture, southeast of the city, where they made their monies.

Will Cuppy, who worked in the local Rock Island shops at one time, and who was arrested here last week will have a hearing today in the federal court at Guthrie.

The dug-out used by the gang has been watched for the past two years. It is located in the McConkey pasture and is situated one hundred yards straight south of the first mile post on the Rock Island east of the city. The entrance is carefully concealed behind a large boulder. This, when placed to one side, reveals a small hole, just large enough for a man to crawl through, which runs eight feet back, then turns and after a length of twenty more feet opens into a dug-out large enough to move around in. Here the operations are said to have been carried on.

First 25-cent and 50-cent pieces were made and turned loose. Later excellent $5 and $10 gold pieces were put on the market. One party alleged to have assisted the gang lives at Purcell, and two others resided at Enid.

Eighteen months ago, when Cuppy was at El Reno, numerous counterfeit five-cent pieces were found in circulation.

KEIFER SUFFERS A HEAVY FIRE

ELEVEN BUILDINGS BURN WITH A TOTAL LOSS OF $50,000.

Sapulpa, Okla., June 21.—Eleven buildings in the business and residence sections of Keifer, an oil town near Sapulpa, were destroyed by a fire of unknown origin this afternoon. The loss probably will reach $50,000. The town is without fire fighting apparatus and the water pressure in the mains was of no avail.

The stricken section is west of the Frisco tracks and buildings and stocks were burned as follows: Dr. Jones' drug store, Hughes' pool hall, W. M. Everts' hardware store, Charles Denton's residence, the Keifer State bank, the Keifer Mercantile company, the Delong grocery store, the Ohio restaurant, W. L. Barnes' office, H. G. Rhodabarger's residence and W. H. Hick's residence.

OKLAHOMA'S WORTH.

Estimates on Assessed Valuation is Enormous.

Guthrie, Okla., June 21.—Oklahoma's assessed valuation for 1909 will reach figures between $300,000,000, estimates R. C. Cain of State Auditor Trapp's office. Mr. Cain is the secretary and accountant of the state board of equalization and assessment.

The assessment was $727,722,518. The board has not completed its work by any means but preliminary figures fix a probable increase of 25 per cent on public service corporation's property, with the exception of telephones, telegraphs, railroads, etc., which are still out. Railroads will have a valuation approximately 5 per cent higher than last year. Local assessors, according to the 16 counties out of 75 which have reported will run their totals 10 per cent higher than 1908. The counties of Eastern Oklahoma are reporting higher totals, due to natural increase in valuations and to removal of restrictions from Indian lands. There is a natural increase over the entire state perceptible in the reports, and Mr. Cain thinks his estimate conservative.

Corporate property of a public service nature will probably run towards $250,000,000.

Can You Find It?

One of the hardest things to find these days, is a woman's waist. This is because of the new fangled dresses they wear now, the style which has come over from Paris, and was originated, no one knows how or under what circumstances. According to the new style the waist line is all the way from where God intended it to be up to a ribbon around the neck. It's location by the mere use of the eye is as elusive as the bag of gold at the end of the rainbow.—Mt. Pleasant Times-Review.

The Knockers Knock.

The Guthrie Capital, after devoting most of its paper to an assault on Oklahoma City, now runs a regular department entitled "Graft City News". The Oklahoma City commercial club's advertising committee should do the right thing by the Capital, if it can show the proper circulation. Happy is that town whose rivals put in most of their time knocking it instead of trying to be good towns themselves.—McAlester News.

Their Deeds are Evil.

Some people put their merchandise and goods which they have for sale in show windows and show cases, some put them behind screens and blinds. Some people had rather buy some of the things they buy behind these screens and blinds. We wonder if this is in keeping with the good book where it says: "Men love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil."—Marshall County News.

WILLIAM CYRTER, D.D.

From Oklahoma Baptist Journal.
Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is—1 John III. 2.

The text shows us at once the definiteness and the indefiniteness of Scripture statement. The definite is grand and glorious, but in indefiniteness is majestic and sublime. There is an indefiniteness that is filled with doubt and haunting fear; there is another, however, that is filled so full with glorious promise as to stagger the mind and imagination of man and make him hesitate to go forward in the line of its fulfillment.

It is of this kind that the text here speaks. The definite "now are we" of the first clause is followed by the still more definite "we know" of the last clause, but in between, the apostle, realizing how great already is our blessing as sons of God, hesitates to go forward to the concluding state of glory that awaits us, and with hesitating mind and halting imagination he says: "It doth not yet appear what we shall be." Mind can not grasp the thought of the glory that shall afterward await us. "But," he says, with a little of his old confidence returning, "we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is."

There is a threefold cord that should bind every Christian to his God, and to the vows that he has taken upon himself. The strands of this cord are: Faith or hope, patience and duty; duty for the present hour, patience for the present trial, and faith for the glorious future which God has promised.

At first glance it seems as tho the text were all glory, all hope and joy and best promise. There seems to be no duty mentioned, no patience urged as necessary. Hope is the lodestar in this firmament of promise, and it is that that attracts our hearts and holds them by its power.

"Now are we the sons of God!" resent glory! "And it doth not yet appear what we shall be." Future expectation! "But we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." Definite promise! Where is the duty here? If you will look closely you will find it in the hiatus between the first and second clauses. First, there is the definite statement made as to our sonship with God, and then the hesitating expression that dares not predicate what our future glory shall be. In between these two lies the thought of duty as I see it.

"Now are we the sons of God." Can anything be higher than that? It is that which makes heaven's arches ring with glad hosannas as the redeemed of the Lord realize what it all means. Surely this is as high as human thought and desire can reach, and yet there seems to be a higher glory in reserve for us, for the apostle goes on to say that, notwithstanding all this that we have already received, it is no guide in any sense as to the greater blessings we shall receive—blessings so great that he is compelled to be indefinite in mentioning them, and all he can say concerning them is: "It doth not yet appear what we shall be."

What does it all mean, and what is our duty in view of these things? Ask that young man born in a cultured Christian home, given all the advantages of physical, mental and spiritual development, having superabounding love lavished upon him, being the object of constant thought and care and solicitude. Will he not tell you that for all the love, for all the care, for all the high and best advantages which have been given him, he owes a higher duty to the parents who have thus watched over him and given him these things? Will he not tell you that, for all the privileges and opportunities rests upon him toward those who have made these things possible? Then if he does not he is an ingrate, a renegade, a base betrayer of the heart's greatest trust, and does not know what duty is!

What is it we expect of one from such a home, from one who has had such blessings showered upon him? You say as you see him go forward with high endeavor and noble aim: "He ought to make something of himself; he certainly has had a good start." Ah, yes, there is everything in the start, is there not? But the better the start he greater the responsibility resting upon us, the higher the duty that God requires of us!

has given us the greatest opportunities as his children, and is giving them to us every day. It is only a start, tho, that He has given us. "Now," He says, after He has given us all the care and attention and love that was necessary, after lavishing upon us all the blessings that His absorbing love suggested, after giving unto us salvation itself through Jesus Christ our Lord—"now work out your own salvation with fear and trembling. I have put it in you, now work it out. Let the world see that it is there, and that you are using it day by day."

"Now are we the sons of God." Aye, but that is not all that God wants us to be. There are many kinds of sons: Slothful sons, selfish sons, thoughtless sons, indifferent sons, and earnest, zealous, loving sons. Which kind are we? Are we doing nothing to show our sonship, our filial devotion? Then were it better that we had not the name! Since we have been reckoned into the family of God let us be worthy of the name! Let us realize our higher duty because of the great blessing that God has given unto us! Here is where the duty is shown. For every blessing that God has given to you, for every advantage that he has put or is putting into your hand, He will require the higher duty and the world will require it, too, based upon a perfectly fair and reasonable view of your relationship with God.

We see then that sonship involves duty. That duty fulfilled, the apostle rightly pauses ere he pronounces the blessing that God will then give. "Now are we the sons of God; but, that sonship rightly used, that filial duty rightly fulfilled, it doth not yet appear what we shall be!" The statement is not so strange, or do we wonder that John used it in such hesitation when we look upon it in this way. A faithful son, a loving father; the son fulfilling in every way possible his filial duty! Can you or I put the limits on that father's love and say to what bounds it will go? Nay, with such faithfulness, with such filial devotion shown, it doth not yet appear, it never will appear, to what lengths that father's love will go! A need arises, a great one perhaps, for the son, and the father promptly meets it, and you say: "Well, that is certainly more than could have been expected! Human love can go no farther than that." Can it not? Wait and see. Another need arises, and again

the father meets it, and gladly meets it, and the world is astonished at the father's sacrifice. Sacrifice? The father sees no sacrifice in it. Why, sir, he says to expostulating friends, "you don't know that boy. Think of how he has stood by me. How he has worked with me day in and day out from the time he was able to do anything. He never complained, he never shirked his duty, he never went back on his old father, even when most of the world seemed to have gone back on me. Why, bless your life, sir, after such devotion as that boy has shown, after such dutiful regard as he has given, I would sell all I have and give it to him willingly, if he needed it! I would dare anything. I would risk every thing, rather than that he should suffer."

Have I overdrawn it, fathers? Nay, it can not be overdrawn, it can not be rightly pictured, the love and devotion a father has to a faithful, dutiful, filial son. That, therefore, is just the way John puts it here. He can not picture it all out, and so he just says as his imagination fails him: "If we are not the sons of God, and faithful sons, duty-loving sons, then it doth not yet appear what we shall be, for eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for those that love Him."

Here then is a call to duty, and at the same time a stimulus to it. As we have been received into the sonship of God, it is not in order to selfish ease, but it is to work for Him and for humanity. Every advantage He has given you, every blessing, every opportunity that is yours lays the duty, the responsibility, the more heavily upon you. "Unto whomsoever much is given of him shall much be required." God has given much to you and He is expecting much in return. Yet it is not merely to be in payment for his blessings, a "quid pro quo" to balance the account; for just as soon as the Lord sees we are in earnest, that we are improving the talents that He has given us, that we are faithful and loyal to Him, then, John says, human imagination can not picture the infinitely greater blessings that He will give us, and the sons of God now, the state we then shall hold will be so inconceivably glorious that it hath not entered into the mind of man even to imagine it!

One other thing that is emphasized in this same inference of duty, however, is patience. "It doth not yet appear what we shall be."

How hard it is for us to possess our souls in patience, especially in the matter of Christian work and results. We know how rampant sin is, we know how might God is, and often, ah, how often, do we wonder that God ever allows such wickedness to continue. In the midst of our impatience we cry: "How long, O Lord, how long?" and the answer that comes back is: "It doth not yet appear." Yet a little while, till the day break and the darkness be away.

We all must realize as workers for God that we can not wage our warfare on any lines of earthly strategy or wisdom. There are many who would have ushered in the millennium even before Christ was crucified, if we may be pardoned the anachronism! These, however, were the impatient ones who were always carrying their swords half-drawn, who were anxious for the signal to be given to fall upon their enemies and win them either dead or alive for God.

It is always a longer process to win an enemy by love than by force but the former is by far the more permanent victory. Mohammed made converts quicker by fire and sword than Jesus did by love, but Jesus' converts last longer and His system is more widely spread today. Force endures for a time, but only as long as it maintains its strength. Love never falleth. It increases in power as it goes forward and wins at last even the most intractable to be its strong devoted followers.

Do not find fault, then, with God's plans. Do not be crying out with the doubting ones: "Where is the promise of His coming, for since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were from the foundation of the world." They do not! There is a steady, quiet work of grace going on throughout the world that is going at last to bring the kingdoms of this world to Christ, and cause all opposition to cease, and peace and righteousness to establish itself as a universal blessing.

Quiet, yes, but mighty through God to the pulling down of the strongholds of Satan! Quite it was that fateful night when Sennacherib lay down before the walls of Jerusalem after his boasting message to Hezekiah. He expected on the morrow

"The Angel of death spread his wings on the blast, And breathed in the face of the foe as he passed, And the might of the Gentiles unsmote by the sword Hath melted like snow in the glance of the Lord."

Quite, as on that other fateful night in Belshazzar's hall, when Daniel read the mystic writing on the wall. "Thou art weighed in the balances, and found wanting," and the story closes with the significant words: "And that night was Belshazzar king of the Chaldeans slain."

Do not doubt God's power because He does not make a great noise. The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, not noisy nor showy. We are not fighting with bluff, or bluster, or bombast, but with such mighty weapons as work with the power and yet the silence of the best and most carefully constructed machinery.

LACK OF FAITH IN ALDRICH

TATT AND CABINET LOOKING AFTER CORPORATION TAX.

PROGRESSIVES FEELING BLUE

Believe Alleged Friends of Corporation Will Kneel It—Fear Fate of Income Tax Idea.

Washington June 21—To indicate how thoroughly in earnest President Taft is about putting the corporation tax amendment through the Senate developed today. The problem is receiving constant consideration at the hands of the Cabinet and the members of the State Finance Committee and is being worked out step by step.

There are evidences that the President has not the same abiding faith in Senator Aldrich in the matter of corporation tax that he has in the matter of the alleged revision downward and the President has taken steps that will insure his getting before the Senate the kind of a corporation tax amendment that he wants.

For this week he is availing himself of the services of Attorney General Wickesham. The Attorney General made two trips to the Capitol today to consult with the Republican members of the Finance Committee. President Taft has urged that in these conferences Senator Root who is not a member of the Finance Committee participate while Secretary of State Knox is working with the President on the measure.

Phases of the new amendment that have been tentatively settled relative to the question of bonds and to the question of exemption. It is agreed that the tax will not touch preferred stocks or bonds except where one corporation controls another corporation in which case the holding company must pay the tax on the interest of the bonds of the concern for which it is the holding company. The amendment will also provide a method of reaching companies which issue bonds in excess of the amount of their stock.

The President for the past few days has been flooded with protests and objections against the proposed tax. Some of these come from corporation men and some from Republicans who object to having an income tax displaced by a corporation tax. The great objection of the corporation managers to a corporation tax is not so much the amount of tax involved but as one of them put it to the President today, to the system of inspection which must be established to insure the Government getting all of the tax due it.

We all know said this man that we are coming to direct taxation sooner or later and it might as well come now. There will be only a few who will object to paying the small tax but what we all object to is some $1,200 inspector coming into our offices getting the inside workings of our affairs and then selling them to a rival for $200.

Criticism is coming in from all over the country but President Taft maintains an optimistic view of the situation. The bulk of the criticism is that the corporation tax movement will result in nothing more than the sidetracking of the proposed income tax.

Progressive Republican Senators today predicted death for the President's net earnings tax amendment to the pending tariff bill. They asserted that it will be assassinated in the house of its reputed friends meaning Senator Aldrich and other opponents of their income tax plans. As explained by them their sentiment being based largely on the attitude of the Eastern press, the attitude of Wall street which the progressives claim Senator Aldrich and his friends exclusively represent and the attitude of the Aldrich crowd in general the corporation tax will be killed in the conference between the two houses of Congress on the tariff bill before it is finally passed.

As for the proposed Constitutional amendment permitting the levying of an income tax, they recently believe it will pass Congress only to be defeated in enough of the States controlled by the Aldrich Senators and their friends to sign its death warrant.

MET FUTURE WIFE ON TRIP
AROUND THE WORLD.

PARENTS OF BOTH OBJECT

Knew Each Other When Children
But Cupid Was Not Busy Then.

Lincoln Neb. June 19—From the palace of a duke to the calm heights of Grand Lake is a short or three of the highest peaks in Colorado is spun a thread of romance and persistent wooing that will culminate in the marriage of Helen Berger the daughter of a wealthy Nebraska grain man and William J. Bryan Jr. son of the recent candidate for president on the Democratic ticket.

Young Bryan knew his fiancée when both were children but Cupid was not looking about them then.

The meeting from which their love sprang came when the Bryans were making their trip around the world. The party arrived in Vienna and Miss Bryan then dated a local and then when William did not come back she went to the place of interest to another and through parties that are now galleries and museums.

In one of the old palaces the Bryans and the Berbers met. Young Bryan and Miss Berger immediately drew a circle about themselves from which they sent out rays of devotedness to each other. Alexander Berger the father of the bride to be saw this exclusive love and he and his daughter immediately left their new abode elsewhere he said they went to Paris and to Live pool. William Jr. tried to follow but he could invent no adequate excuse for leaving the family party. Finally he did break away and arrived in Liverpool a day after the Berbers had departed for America.

When the Bryans returned to America the pursuing wooer found that the Berbers had returned to Lincoln where they formerly lived. The Bryans came to Lincoln the same train from which they stepped after their world trip was the conveyance that bore Mr. Berger and his daughter to Grand Lake. Colorado. Not disheartened by missing Miss Berger at Liverpool New York and Lincoln William Jr. raced to Fairview then back to town and took the next train for Colorado.

Since Miss Berger's mother died a few years ago she has lived with Mr. and Mrs. Levering who not only her father. The Leverings opposed a marriage on the ground that the globe-trotters were too young. William J. Bryan dropped politics long enough to suggest to his son it is said that he had better wait a few years before he married. William Jr. is 23 years old and his fiancée is 20.

Daily last summer the nation of the mountains of Saint running brooks and leaving trout caught the fancy of William Jr. He had just finished his sophomore years at the University of Nebraska. With fishing rod landing net and a half dozen books of flies in his satchel William Bryan Jr. left the university for the mountains. Curiously enough the fishing near Grand Lake most attracted him. Miss Berger was still there. After a few weeks young Bryan returned to Fairview. The presidential campaign was at its hottest, but the son of the Democratic leader didn't care much for politics. Again this summer William Jr. and Miss Berger are at Grand Lake. Miss Berger is living with Mr. and Mrs. Levering. The announcement of the wedding was first made at their home. It is understood that the young couple will go to Tucson Ariz. after June 24.

OUR GUTHRIE CORRESPONDENT

Guthrie, Okla., June 21.—A special two days meeting of the State Board of Agriculture held at the office of the board in this city Thursday and Friday, was one of the most important meetings of that body ever held, not so much in the volume of business transacted as in the number and importance of new issues created.

The meeting was called to let the contracts for the district agricultural school buildings at Tishomingo and Warner. This brought up the question as to whether the State Board of Agriculture or the Board of Public Affairs had the authority to let these contracts. The Board of Agriculture has always contended that the legislature could not modify or abridge its powers and duties as a board of regents as specified in the Constitution, and by unanimous vote proceeded to let these contracts as they had in April let the contract for the boys dormitory and women's building at the A. & M. College. The contract for the Warner and Tishomingo schools went to the McKee Construction Co., of Muskogee, Oklahoma, at a price of $18,654, for the Warner school, and $18,758 for the Tishomingo school. Each building to be finished October 1, 1909.

Much of the time of the two days session was devoted to the affairs of the Agricultural and Mechanical College at Stillwater. Orders previously made for the purchase of individual specimens of pure bred cattle, hogs and sheep were confirmed and added to, and director John A. Craig of the experiment station, and Ewart White, chairman of the college committee, were instructed to examine and make the necessary selections. Important sheep breeding experiments under the authority and with the co-operation of the Federal department were ordered carried out.

The financial budget for the ensuing year was carefully gone over and approved. Selections to fill vacancies at the heads of several departments created by resignations, etc., were given careful consideration and final action taken in the selection of President Connell and Chairman White of the college committee to visit St. Louis or other central points and meet a number of the applicants whose qualifications had been passed upon by the board. Several important chairs are to be filled and the board recognizes the necessity of exercising great care in making these selections, since not only the qualifications but the personality of the teacher must be taken into consideration.

The board ordered the registrar at the college to advertise for and receive bids on the years supply of fuel. It also ordered the secretary to renew a $20,000 insurance policy on boilers. Both of these latter items are included in the duties of other boards of regents which the board of Public Affairs was appointed to take over and perform. It should be understood that there is no conflict or friction between the Board of Agriculture and the Board of Public Affairs as to their relations, and the rights of the latter in all matters not involved in the constitutional provisions creating the Board of Agriculture, but the latter board holds that the Constitution having made them the board of regents of the A. & M. College, and that all the duties of the Board of Regents are thereby made incumbent upon them and that they cannot if they would, turn these duties over to the Board of Public Affairs, the legislature having no power to relieve or modify those responsibilities. The Institute committee of the board, together with the president, secretary and superintendent of the Institutes were ordered to prepare a program for the three days annual state Institute to be held at Stillwater in August.

The work of the board in every department was reported to be making rapid and substantial progress and a special satisfaction was created by Live Stock Superintendent Bryan's report of local interest and co-operation in the work of tick eradication. County farmers institute work will be pressed during the new institute year which opens with the annual meeting, with renewed vigor. With the exception of the four north-western counties of the state where Institutes are to be held during the first week in July. The state is now thoroughly organized and the work from this time forward will make substantial and progressive strides. The board will take an active and earnest part in the work of encouraging county exhibits at the State Fair, and a big corn exhibit at the National Corn Exposition at Omaha next December.

The State Board of Agriculture, under the terms of the Russell Act, will not take up any county demonstration farm work until January 1st, 1910. They are co-operating wherever possible with the United States farm demonstration work which is being carried on extensively in many counties under the excellent management of W. D. Bentley.

El Paso, Texas, June 21.—The Mexican Herald, Mexico City, says: "Replying to a communication from the White House at Washington, through the Mexican embassy there, President Diaz has expressed his desire to meet President Taft for a personal interview, which will take place at one of the points on the boundary line between Mexico and the United States some time during the last part of the year."

Is Mark Twain Guilty?

Mark Twain should not endorse this theory that Bacon wrote Shakespeare too heartily or after he is dead and gone some one may arise with a cryptogram and a lot of logic to prove that Mark Twain's books were written by his old friend, Henry H. Rogers, the brilliant financier who patmed the books off on Mark Twain. His own reputation in business circles might be injured if he confessed such authorship. And the man, if at all ingenious, could make out a good case.

COUNTERFEIT DEN IS DISCOVERED

PROFITS ON NICKEL AND DIME BASIS TOO SLOW.

Later the Country Was Flooded With Fires and Tens.

Shawnee, Okla., June 22.—Some interesting facts have come to light in the discovery of a group of alleged counterfeiters, in this section by government officials. In the report which is being prepared for the State Bankers' association, it is stated that the gang had operated in this vicinity for the past two years and had a dug-out on the edge of the McConkey pasture, southeast of the city, where they made their money.

Will Cuppy, who worked in the local Rock Island shops at one time, and who was arrested here last week will have a hearing today in the federal court at Guthrie.

The dug-out used by the gang has been watched for the past two years. It is located in the McConkey pasture and is situated one hundred yards straight south of the first mile post on the Rock Island east of the city. The entrance is carefully concealed behind a large boulder. This, when placed to one side, reveals a small hole, just large enough for a man to crawl through, which runs eight feet back, then turns and after a length of twenty more feet opens into a dug-out large enough to move around in. Here the operations are said to have been carried on.

First 26-cent and 50-cent pieces were made and turned loose. Later excellent $5 and $10 gold pieces were put on the market. One party alleged to have assisted the gang lives at Purcell, and two others resided at Enid.

Eighteen months ago, when Cuppy was at El Reno, numerous counterfeit five-cent pieces were found in circulation.

KEIFER SUFFERS A HEAVY FIRE

ELEVEN BUILDINGS BURN WITH A TOTAL LOSS OF $50,000.

Sapulpa, Okla., June 21.—Eleven buildings in the business and residence sections of Keifer, an oil town near Sapulpa, were destroyed by a fire of unknown origin this afternoon. The loss probably will reach $50,000. The town is without fire fighting apparatus and the water pressure in the mains was of no avail.

The stricken section is west of the Frisco tracks and buildings and stocks were burned as follows: Dr. Jones' drug store, Hughes' pool hall, W. M. Everts' hardware store, Charles Denton's residence, the Keifer State bank, the Keifer Mercantile company, the DeLong grocery store, the Ohio restaurant, W. L. Barnes' office, H. G. Rhoadsberger's residence and W. H. Hick's residence.

OKLAHOMA'S WORTH.

Estimates on Assessed Valuation is Enormous.

Guthrie, Okla., June 21.—Oklahoma's assessed valuation for 1909 will reach figures between $800,000,000, estimates R. C. Cain at State Auditor Trapp's office. Mr. Cain is the secretary and accountant of the state board of equalization and assessment.

The assessment was $727,722,518. The board has not completed its work by any means but preliminary figures fix a probable increase of 25 per cent on public service corporation's property, with the exception of telephones, telegraphs, railroads, etc., which are still out. Railroads will have a valuation approximately 5 per cent higher than last year. Local assessors, according to the 16 counties out of 75 which have reported will run their totals 10 per cent higher than 1908. The counties of Eastern Oklahoma are reporting higher totals, due to natural increase in valuations and to removal of restrictions from Indian lands. There is a natural increase over the entire state perceptible in the reports, and Mr. Cain thinks his estimate conservative.

Corporate property of a public service nature will probably run towards $250,000,000.

Can You Find It?

One of the hardest things to find these days, is a woman's waist. This is because of the new fangled dresses they wear now, the style which has come over from Paris, and was originated, no one knows how or under what circumstances. According to the new style the waist line is all the way from where God intended it to be up to a ribbon around the neck. It's location by the mere use of the eye is as elusive as the bag of gold at the end of the rainbow.—Mt. Pleasant Times-Review.

The Knockers Knock.

The Guthrie Capital, after devoting most of its paper to an assault on Oklahoma City, now runs a regular department entitled "Graft City News." The Oklahoma City commercial club's advertising committee should do the right thing by the Capital, if it can show the proper circulation. Happy is that town whose rivals put in most of their time knocking it instead of trying to be good towns themselves.—McAlester News.

Their Deeds are Evil.

Some people put their merchandise and goods which they have for sale in show windows and show cases, some put them behind screens and blinds. Some people had rather buy some of the things they buy behind these screens and blinds. We wonder if this is in keeping with the good book where it says: "Men love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil."—Marshall County News.

"IT DOETH NOT YET APPEAR
WHAT WE SHALL BE"

WILLIAM CRYER, D.D.

From Oklahoma Baptist Journal.

Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is.—1 John III. 2.

The text shows us at once the definiteness and the indefiniteness of Scripture statement. The definite is grand and glorious, but in indefiniteness is majestic and sublime. There is an indefiniteness that is filled with doubt and haunting fear; there is another, however, that is filled so full with glorious promise as to stagger the mind and imagination of man and make him hesitate to go forward in the line of its fulfillment.

It is of this kind that the text here speaks. The definite "now are we" of the first clause is followed by the still more definite "we know" of the last clause, but in between, the apostle, realizing how great already is our blessing as sons of God, hesitates to go forward to the concluding state of glory that awaits us, and with hesitating mind and halting imagination he says: "It doth not yet appear what we shall be." Mind can not grasp the thought of the glory that shall afterward await us. "But," he says, with a little of his old confidence returning, "we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is."

There is a threefold word that should bind every Christian to his God, and to the vows that he has taken upon himself. The strands of this cord are: Faith or hope, patience and duty; duty for the present hour, patience for the present trial, and faith for the glorious future which God has promised.

At first glance it seems as tho the text were all glory, all hope and joy and blessed promise. There seems to be no duty mentioned, no patience urged as necessary. Hope is the lodestar in this firmament of promise, and it is that that attracts our hearts and holds them by its power.

"Now are we the sons of God!" resound glory! "And it doth not yet appear what we shall be." Future expectation! "But we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." Definite promise! Where is the duty here? If you will look closely you will find it in the hiatus between the first and second clauses. First, there is the definite statement made as to our sonship with God, and then the hesitating expression that dares not predicate what our future glory shall be. In between these two lies the thought of duty as I see it.

"Now are we the sons of God." Can anything be higher than that? It is that which makes heaven's arches ring with glad hosannas as the redeemed of the Lord realize what it all means. Surely this is as high as human thought and desire can reach, and yet there seems to be a higher glory in reserve for us, for the apostle goes on to say that, notwithstanding all this that we have already received, it is no guide in any sense as to the greater blessings we shall receive—blessings so great that he is compelled to be indefinite in mentioning them, and all he can say concerning them is: "It doth not yet appear what we shall be."

What does it all mean, and what is our duty in view of these things? Ask that young man born in a cultured Christian home, given all the advantages of physical, mental and spiritual development, having superabounding love lavished upon him, being the object of constant thought and care and solicitude. Will he not tell you that for all the love, for all the care, for all the high and best advantages which have been given him, he owes a higher duty to the parents who have thus watched over him and given him these things? Will he not tell you that, for all the privileges and opportunities rests upon him toward those who have made these things possible? Then if he does not he is an ingrate, a renegade, a base betrayer of the heart's greatest trust, and does not know what duty is!

What is it we expect of one from such a home, from one who has had such blessings showered upon him? You say as you see him go forward with high endeavor and noble aim: "He ought to make something of himself; he certainly has had a good start." Ah, yes, there is everything in the start, is there not? But the better the start the greater the responsibility resting upon us, the higher the duty that God requires of us!

has given us the greatest opportunities as his children, and is giving them to us every day. It is only a start, tho, that He has given us. "Now," He says, after He has given us all the care and attention and love that was necessary, after lavishing upon us all the blessings that His absorbing love suggested, after giving unto us salvation itself through Jesus Christ our Lord—"now work out your own salvation with fear and trembling. I have put it in you, now work it out. Let the world see that it is there, and that you are using it day by day."

"Now are we the sons of God." Aye, but that is not all that God wants us to be. There are many kinds of sons. Stolid sons, selfish sons, thoughtless sons, indifferent sons, and earnest, zealous, loving sons. Which kind are we? Are we doing nothing to show our sonship, our filial devotion? Then were it better that we had not the name! Since we have been reckoned into the family of God let us be worthy of the name! Let us realize our higher duty because of the great blessing that God has given unto us! Here is where the duty is shown. For every blessing that God has given to you, for every advantage that he has put or is putting into your hand, He will require the higher duty and the world will require it, too, based upon a perfectly fair and reasonable view of your relationship with God.

We see then that sonship involves duty. That duty fulfilled, the apostle rightly pauses ere he pronounces the blessing that God will then give. "Now are we the sons of God; but, that sonship rightly used, that filial duty rightly fulfilled, it doth not yet appear what we shall be!" The statement is not so strange, or do we wonder that John used it in such hesitation when we look upon it in this way. A faithful son, a loving father; the son fulfilling in every way possible his filial duty! Can you or I put the limits on that father's love and say to what bounds it will go? Nay, with such faithfulness, with such filial devotion shown, it doth not yet appear, it never will appear, to what lengths that father's love will go! A need arises, a great one perhaps, for the son, and the father promptly meets it, and you say: "Well, that is certainly more than could have been expected! Human love can go no farther than that." Can it not? Wait and see. Another need arises, and again

the father meets it, and gladly meets it, and the world is astonished at the father's sacrifice. Sacrifice? The father sees no sacrifice in it. Why, sir, he says to exasperated friends, "you don't know that boy. Think of how he has stood by me. How he has worked with me day in and day out from the time he was able to do anything. He never complained, he never shirked his duty, he never went back on his old father, even when most of the world seemed to have gone back on me. Why, bless your life, sir, after such devotion as that boy has shown, after such dutiful regard as he has given, I would sell all I have and give it to him willingly, if he needed it! I would dare anything, I would risk every thing, rather than that he should suffer."

Have I overdrawn the fathers? Nay, it can not be overdrawn, it can not be rightly pictured, the love and devotion a father has to a faithful, dutiful, filial son. That, therefore, is just the way John puts it here. He can not picture it all out, and so he just says as his imagination fails him: "If we are not the sons of God, and faithful sons, duty-loving sons, then it doth not yet appear what we shall be, for eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for those that love Him."

Here then is a call to duty, and at the same time a stimulus to it. As we have been received into the sonship of God, it is not in order to selfish ease, but it is to work for Him and for humanity. Every advantage He has given you, every blessing, every opportunity that is yours lays the duty, the responsibility, the more heavily upon you. "Unto whomsoever much is given of him shall much be required." God has given much to you and He is expecting much in return. Yet it is not merely to be in payment for his blessings, a "quid pro quo" to balance the account; for just as soon as the Lord sees we are in earnest, that we are improving the talents that He has given us, that we are faithful and loyal to Him; then, John says, human imagination can not picture the infinitely greater blessings that He will give us, and the sons of God now, the state we then shall hold will be so inconceivably glorious that it hath not entered into the mind of man even to imagine it!

One other thing that is emphasized in this same inference of duty, however, is patience. "It doth not yet appear what we shall be."

How hard it is for us to possess our souls in patience, especially in the matter of Christian work and results. We know how rampant sin is, we know how might God is, and often, ah, how often, do we wonder that God ever allows such wickedness to continue. In the midst of our impatience we cry: "How long, O Lord, how long?" and the answer that comes back is: "It doth not yet appear." Yet a little while, till the day break and the darkness flee away.

We all must realize as workers for God that we can not wage our warfare on any lines of earthly strategy or wisdom. There are many who would have ushered in the millennium even before Christ was crucified, if we may be pardoned the anachronism! These, however, were the impatient ones who were always carrying their swords half-drawn, who were anxious for the signal to be given to fall upon their enemies and win them either dead or alive for God.

It is always a longer process to win an enemy by love than by force, but the former is by far the more permanent victory. Mohammed made converts quicker by fire and sword than Jesus did by love, but Jesus' converts last longer and His system is more widely spread today. Force endures for a time, but only as long as it maintains its strength. Love never faileth. It increases in power as it goes forward and wins at last even the most intractable to be its strong devoted followers.

Do not find fault, then, with God's plans. Do not be crying out with the doubting ones: "Where is the promise of His coming, for since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were from the foundation of the world." They do not! There is a steady, quiet work of grace going on throughout the world that is going at last to bring the kingdoms of this world to Christ, and cause all opposition to cease, and peace and righteousness to establish itself as a universal blessing.

Quiet, yes, but mighty through God to the pulling down of the strongholds of Satan! Quite it was that fateful night when Sennacherib lay down before the walls of Jerusalem after his boasting message to Hezekiah. He expected on the morrow to go up in great power and lay waste the sacred city, but in the darkness of the night—"The Angel of death spread his wings on the blast, And breathed in the face of the foe as he passed, And the might of the Gentiles unsmote by the sword Hath melted like snow in the glance of the Lord." Quite, as on that other fateful night in Belshazzar's hall, when Daniel read the mystic writing on the wall. "Thou art weighed in the balances and found wanting," and the story closes with the significant words: "And that night was Belshazzar king of the Chaldeans slain."

Do not doubt God's power because He does not make a great noise. The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, not noisy nor showy. We are not fighting with bluff, or bluster, or bombast, but with such mighty weapons as work with the power and yet the silence of the best and most carefully constructed machinery.
